China must improve regional foreign policy

Recently held a series of intensive Summit Asia-Pacific region is indeed a clear indication of the world's balance of power shift, Mahbubani (Kishore Mahbubani) has rightly pointed out this point. However, compared to the Yan advocated "benevolence", these summit also from a more fundamental level, raises some important issues. (As for the "benevolent" was, in relation to China, but also worth pondering.)

Evolving situation in the region, the surprising thing is that China has plunged into deep trouble. In the Deng Xiaoping era, along with economic growth, China has always followed a "low profile" foreign policy. This principle has now been abandoned. However, in a variety of interest groups - from the army to the export industry lobby group - have to influence the situation, Beijing has failed to establish a consistent set of regional foreign policy, let alone a global foreign policy. Ministry of Foreign Affairs seems to have no influence.

China claims that, in the region is committed to a comprehensive cooperation with ASEAN (Asean) to maintain a flexible relationship, but China's relations with neighboring countries to pursue bilateral contacts Shique usually practice. China adheres to claim full sovereignty over the South China Sea, which claims the territory of other countries of conflict, especially in Vietnam and the Philippines. China a series of collisions at sea fishing, and these collisions is the Communist Party's official tabloid media background, "Global Times" (Global Times) tough nationalist rhetoric. Despite the small scale of the conflict, but such a collision, and a deeper level of competition on the seabed energy reserves, it will only remind the smaller East Asian countries (and both Japan and Korea), and its dependence on the U.S. national security needs. In some cases, China has prompted them to embrace.

The Obama administration's focus shifted to the Asia-Pacific region, China also faces the problem more complicated. • Since Hillary Clinton (Hillary Clinton) called the region the United States last year, "resident power", and claimed the South China Sea freedom of navigation in the U.S. national interests since this trend began to appear. Obama's recent efforts to promote not including China, Trans-Pacific Strategic Economic Partnership Agreement (TPP), which convey a clear signal that the U.S. intends to strengthen the strategy in East Asia after 1945, based on efforts to expand the economy. In the narrow sense of the East Asian region, the United States is difficult to Australia and India to obtain Beijing's achievements.

To appear Mahbubani said that the process of cooperation, China must first rectify their noisy Ministry of Foreign Affairs, to enhance their competitive level. And this suggested that Beijing would not only like, you will not find easy.

The rise of China in the Asian region and the impact and effect throughout the world, some countries have been so uncomfortable, that is, after all countries have been touched to the original interest. Author calls the "Chinese are caught in deep trouble "are derived, but in fact is not necessarily so, recently, the South China Sea on the proposal of the Philippines, ASEAN countries are not responding, India refused to join the US-Australia alliance had already seen a number of clues, like the American West is back things, whether what it wants is another matter ... the current economic status of China in Asia and the world attention, I can remember a few years ago, China-EU Summit delayed, Premier Wen Jiabao in Europe deliberately bypassed French tour of the purchase at that time, the EU presidency, said the new passage, economic sanctions are no longer suitable for today's China, or else the price will rise in Europe 40%. That being so, a deeper dependence on China's Asia-Pacific economy? Therefore, we do not have to see who glances, change regional foreign policy, only the continuous development and improve themselves.

First, China relied on the main stage of economic ties, so that everyone would make China the money, although it seems very polite, but this single bond is very fragile.

Second, China's present lack of a moral appeal, that is, values that appeal to people, do not agree with your idea, so it is difficult to exercise political influence.

Third, cultural identity, Asia, although more modern but still ancient oriental values deeply rooted, it is probably now we can work to reverse it, revival of cultural traditions increase the affinity of the long term can increase the recognition of people on Men sense.
